Preserve the Power of a Loved One's Voice with Online Archive Service

KENSINGTON NH, Feb. 15/da Vinci Group Inc. - Have you ever wanted to hear your baby's first words, long after they've grown to adulthood? Have you tried to find a way to save a late friend's phone message?

Remembered Voices has pioneered a service to save these voices, safely and reliably, using a phone or internet connection. You create an audio time capsule by recording a group of friends singing "happy birthday" or swapping stories – in the car, in the hospital, at home - and archive it on the company's secure servers. The recordings can be accessed by phone and web, at any time over the next five or more years. Unlike a voice mail, which disappears after 20 days, these recordings remain available for the duration of the account, and can be shared with several friends and family through an ID and password combination.

You can use the service to build a verbal diary, or capture your best recipes with a computer microphone, even recover old cassette recordings by uploading an MP3. The convenience of recording by phone sidesteps even the most technologically challenged, allowing everyone to participate in the preservation of memories.

Remembered Voices helps you to keep a verbal family™ tree, catch a child's first words, and cherish a conversation between generations. Every time you listen to your saved stories, blessings, and comforting words, you'll be returned to that place in time.
